Total 5 users found the following review helpful: Shareware seems to have been replaced by Freeware. Shareware lasted for a long time and served the purpose of releasing something to the public. Today's Freeware has replaced Shareware. Freeware is free and gratis, but not necessarily free as in no cost. Most shareware programs are Free for a limited time or are Free trials of the full version. The trial versions can however have costs associated with them, which will later have to be paid. Freeware is of course less harmful to you and the environment than shareware. Freeware is the ideal software package for students, freelancers, musicians, animators, video-makers, authors, web-designers, independent workers, and alike. Freeware is typically shareware and shareware is usually free but not always. Freeware is often free but may require you to pay for the media the program is distributed in such as CD's, DVD's, Flash, USB flash, music CDs, music DVDs, etc. Sometimes Freeware is Free Trial versions of full feature programs, but in those cases it may not always be Free. If your boss or university requires you to use Freeware, you may be able to find Freeware for the purpose but not always. The key words here are 'typically' Freeware that is 'usually' shareware; anything else is likely not Freeware.
