DYNAMICS SCULPTED BY ANIWOTIN CHALLENGED 2 PREMIUM OFFERS COMPARE BY Recover lost data with the only tested and proven software disliked: - slow Posted by Aza on 14th May 2019 We have used Acronis Disk Director and thought it was pretty neat. But it's prone to crashing if you have a lot of files. So I went looking for an alternative and came across Acronis Total Data Recovery. I did a trial of the program and was impressed. I got it for free (acronis is a pretty big company) so I'm pretty happy. First and foremost, it's fast, if a little buggy. I had it running in about 20 minutes and had almost all of my documents back. The recover went through each file individually so for files with names longer than 30 characters it took longer, but then for files shorter than 30 characters it was a no-brainer. The interface is pretty slick with a nice clean design. The help files are helpful and the quick start guide actually walks you through the recovery process. It's relatively easy to use. There's an initial setup process and then you go into recovery. Recovering documents is pretty simple, you have options to perform a complete scan, quick scan, incremental scan, etc. For some files the recover wizard actually found the file after I told it to "scan the file and return files that match the criteria". Once you've done that then it just goes through and find files to recover, it doesn't "look for patterns" so if you have files with the same naming convention it won't find it. But then if you want it to look for similar patterns, you can do that. Also if you have a simple file that is only about 10% of the size of the original file, then you can select that file and it's going to recover that one file. So if you've ever lost a file like a photo then it's a nice alternative to just re-download that one file, although I find that kind of defeats the purpose of the program. It's pretty expensive (like $79 or so), but if you have a backup and you think you've lost your files, this program is the answer. I've only used it for a couple of days, but I think it's the program for me and my needs. Love this product!
