Alcohol For example, you're standing over the cashier, handing money to the clerk. You watch to make sure the doors are closed before you go back to your car. The clerk nods and hands you your change. You may have other items on your mind. A: You are implying that you want to override the default behavior of the program. That's not a good idea and will make your system unstable. You could use Command Prompt to launch the launcher. For example, launch the launcher from the command prompt: D: cd D:\Program Files

(x86)\Autodesk\Revit\18.0\Application\RevitInstanceManager.exe Once the launcher is launched, click "OK" on the prompt which opens. In the future, you should launch applications from the command prompt. You should always be prepared for situations in which programs do not behave as expected. Q: How to remove certain chars from the front of a string? string="Full Name" I need to remove the 'Full Name' string from string, so it becomes: string=" Name" My code is this: def clean(string): string = "Full Name" string = string.split(string[0]) string[1] I get this error AttributeError:'str' object has no attribute'split' A: string = string.split(string[0]) You are splitting the list. The problem is that you are missing a quote around the first argument. string.split(string[0]) You also have an extra space on either side of your statement: string= "Full Name" Share this: Sean Liss was playing the Warriors in the basketball scene at roughly 9:30 p.m. Saturday when he heard someone yell, "He's out." It was a kid in his college group's sport. Even though he didn't know what game it was, Liss jumped to the conclusion that his friend had just torn his ACL. "I was like, 'Oh, I hope the dude is OK,'" said Liss, a 2011 graduate of Creekside High School who is currently a sophomore at the University of Utah. "(My friend e79caf774b
