street, but the residents at one Midtown apartment complex are far from free of poverty and illness. On Friday, the Building for Homes community held a fundraiser for the Housing Stability Fund's new Lower Manhattan-based Direct Access to Emergency Housing initiative to help aid the city's homeless community. "We need a place to stay," said Larry, a 45-year-old who requested that his last name not be used. The shelter he was living in was crowded and dirty, and he couldn't sleep there. The new facility, a twobedroom apartment in the One Willett Plaza building on West 32nd Street and 6th Avenue, has five bedrooms for the homeless. It also has a beauty parlor, a library and a school. * The American Express Foundation, the charitable arm of American Express, and the League of New York Cities have teamed up to provide over $300,000 in grants through the first two rounds of its Street Readiness program.
