Crucial Throw is an outstanding 2D local sports platformer for mobile where every player has their own important role to play. The game is not a fake physics game where the object is made to fly in the air. The object is controlled by the player as they perform different actions on the field that can be performed in different directions and speeds. The game is not a clone of Super Dash, Hyper Dash, or Leap Shot because those are not physics based sports games. Crucial Throw has its own unique, professional and professional designed game play and is focused on competitive and skill-based gameplay. The game is a relaxing sports game at the same time because it's easy to play, but hard to master. Game Play Video: The game has a smooth animated fast paced gameplay with a lot of personality. The game tries to be very similar to Super Smash Brothers Melee, in contrast to the simple gameplay of Super Smash Brothers Brawl. The game will become harder and more challenging with every iteration. The game has a total of 5 game modes: Quick Match, Time Trials, Time Attack, Team Match, and Tutorial. We understand that the video could be funny for some players, but we hope that players can still get a good feel of the gameplay and see what we have been working on over the past year. What's new in Theyest Thou:

is a new VR driving game featuring a “dark” theme that infuses classic arcade experiences with an exciting new open world racing setup. The game is available right now for Rift, PSVR and Vive for $39.99 and comes in both single player and multiplayer modes. We had an interview with Matt Prior, Lead Game Designer, and a look at the early builds of the new VR game. The concept for the game is to take the best aspects of arcade racing games, which don’t give players a penalty for crashing, and blend them with a futuristic open world design and the freedom of movement brought by VR. Question: Cybercrasher’s Guide: What is Danger Course VR? Matt Prior: Danger Course VR is the single player and multiplayer racing simulation game for virtual reality. Developed by we’ve been studios, it is designed to create a racing simulator that brings together some of the most popular and beloved video game characteristics with a simplified open world design and a truly next generation VR experience. The game offers the most immersive aspects of arcade racing games, which don’t penalize players for crashing: real-time damage, automatically repair items, blood and injury, adrenaline and focus, and a variety of character customization options like helmets, outfits, weapons and a massive collectible catalog. CG: While we did use the controller as a means of shooting the player’s laser blaster, it is a purely skill-based game. There is no aim assist or computer driven, but your opponents will lean into the directional thruster, turn off your fuel, and lead you into the wall rather than the other way around. The only assist is your friends (and fellow racers) help and coaching on the rest of your life. CG: Taking the hardest sequence of corners...The turns are blind and I love it! The rock wall rides, the craters, those tight, diagonal corners, and the dive bombing helicopters just taking the spins out of you; all of it looks amazing. CG: We did try to include all the well known favorite racetracks from arcade racing games, characters, and events from FPS games, such as Mario Kart, Rock n’ roll racing, and WW2 vehicles. We tried to use all of the iconic aspects of all these games, while keeping them simple enough to work with the unique elements in VR. All of the obstacles, such as rocks, rubble
