Q: Is there any difference between "X" and "X-SOMETHING" in jQuery? I've seen "X", "X-SOMETHING" and "X-SOMETHING" in jQuery. Is there any difference between them? Like the "X" means "not empty" and so on, I'm just interested in the 1st, 2nd and 3rd one. A: From the jquery.com site: By using a dash as the prefix for CSS- and JavaScript-specific properties and functions, you can more clearly express your intent to apply properties to elements whose class name contains the value specified, and you eliminate the need to create an explicit element via `$()`. So, by adding - to the class name of an element, you are requesting it will be matched by the stylesheet. A: According to the link posted in the answer by asto I was wondering why that is? So, I did a little research and found the following: jQuery states that an ID can be either "X" or "X-", a class can be either "X" or "X-" and a selector can be either "X", "X-" or "X.-X". Therefore, one can easily determine by looking at the syntax which one is looking for. For example, in the following selector: `$('#course_form input[value="'+course.title+'"]')`; What the jQuery documentation states would look like is this: `$('#course_form input[value="'+course.title+'"]')`; This is a no-duh statement by jQuery, but it's worth nothing. A: the x in `$('#idx')` is selector id not the css selector. the x- in `$('#idx')-something` means that the actual id is not needed in the selector. in the role of mediator and leader; it would appear that real power lies with a possible return to the bloodline, something which has not happened since the Ottoman Empire. A Sketch in Time-Reversal - jeffreyward ===== pieter Couple of comment about this: 1\ _ "this isn't just about the trick of seeing into the future" _ This is only if you believe that (1) time flows at different speeds in different directions and (2) that the future is closer than the past. Red-shift does not change that. 2\ _ "It's a similar trick as all that predicting the future" _ This is only partly true. Unlike for predicting the future, it only works for the past. Which is exactly what you want for time-travel. Inhibition of nAChR function in the dorsal root ganglion during conus medullaris stimulation in cats. We investigated the effects of stimulating the Nucleus Solitarius (NTS) on the nAChRs in the dorsal root ganglion (DRG) to obtain information about the cholinergic modulation of the pain-related responses of the DRG in response to the conus medullaris (CM) stimulation. We used fluorescence histochemistry with nicotinic acetylcholine receptors (nAChRs), including $\alpha 7$ -nAChRs and $\alpha 4\beta 2$ -nAChRs. The 2-deoxy-D-glucose (2-DG) was employed to estimate the neuronal excitability in DRG in the NTS-, CM-, and CM plus NTS-stimulated animals. The inhibition of nAChR function in the DRG in response to NTS stimulation was associated with a decreased neuronal excitability of DRG in the NTS-, CM-, and CM plus NTS-stimulated animals. In addition, we found an increased soma size of DRG cells in NTS-, CM-, and CM plus NTS-stimulated animals. However, the expression of $\alpha 7$ - and $\alpha 4\beta 2$ -nAChRs was decreased in the DRG in response to NTS stimulation. The present study suggests that the NTS stimulation inhibits the nAChRs in the DRG, thereby decreasing the neuronal excitability of the DRG, and that cholinergic modulating pathways can be activated in response to the stimulation of the CM, although the study cannot determine the mechanism underlying the increased expression of β
