Bernie Sanders called on Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton on Monday to release transcripts of her paid speeches to Goldman Sachs, and for the Democratic National Committee to release the transcripts of its paid speakers and consultants. The Democratic presidential candidate spoke Monday on the same day her campaign released an audio recording of a Goldman Sachs executive bragging about out-lobbying government regulators. Sanders said Clinton's paid speeches are just as important as the audio released by her campaign on Monday, and that the nominee should release transcripts of all her paid speeches and speeches to the DNC, including those made by former DNC chief fundraiser Terry McAuliffe and President Obama's former administration transition chief John Podesta. Sanders is the first major competitor to Clinton to call for the DNC to release all of its paid speakers and consultants, and the first to call for Clinton to release all of her speeches to Goldman Sachs and other Wall Street firms. (Clinton has released some of the Goldman Sachs speeches, but not all of them.) Clinton has accepted $675,000 from the world's largest investment bank in speaking fees for paid events with potential to influence her thinking as the country's top diplomat, top law enforcement officials and president. That includes speaking appearances and paid speaking events in Canada and Ireland as well. "I think that the American people deserve to have all the information that can be found by releasing the transcripts of the speeches she made in which she was paid by investment banks, and other major financial institutions," Sanders said in an interview on MSNBC's "Morning Joe." "They also need to know the transcripts of all the speeches that the DNC paid for, including the speeches by Terry McAuliffe, who has been a major player on many of the major issues that we are struggling with." McAuliffe is a friend of Clinton's and worked on her 2008 campaign. As
