gw7. Cytomegalovirus-specific CD4+ T cells from the blood of patients with systemic lupus erythematosus and their enhanced capacity to elicit an autoreactive CD4+ T cell response in vitro. In vitro stimulation of peripheral blood mononuclear cells (PBMC) from patients with systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE) with ultraviolet-inactivated cytomegalovirus (MCMV) resulted in stimulation of CD4+ T cell subsets (CD2+CD3- as well as CD2-CD3+) that was higher than that of PBMC from control subjects. The difference was particularly striking for the CD2-CD3+ subset which was found in a threefold higher percentage of the PBMC from SLE patients than from controls.

Autoreactive CD4+ T cells bearing a surface phenotype consistent with the anti-DNA antibody response in SLE could be expanded in culture by cocultivation with MCMV-stimulated PBMC of SLE patients.

The likelihood of expansion of autoreactive CD4+ T cells in SLE patients was further increased by selective stimulation with MCMV-infected cells as compared to culture with UV-inactivated virus. Q: Why does a ";" terminate the #define statement? I can't find any
